

Mouth guards offer powerful protection

Learn how they can help — and the most common reasons you might need one

A mouth guard is a device designed to cover and protect teeth. Your dentist can determine if one could benefit you.

Commonly used for:

- Bruxism (Grinding and Clenching): Night guards help prevent wear and tear due to grinding, often done while sleeping.
- Temporomandibular Joint Disorders: TMJ splints help alleviate jaw pain associated with TMJ.
- Sports Activities: Mouth guards can protect teeth from injuries during sports.

Can help you avoid:

- Tooth Damage: Bruxism can cause teeth to flatten, chip, fracture or loosen, leading to sensitivity and the need for restorative dental work.
- Jaw Pain and Dysfunction: Grinding and clenching can strain the temporomandibular joint (TMJ), causing stiffness, headaches and TMJ disorders.
- Muscle Fatigue and Pain: Muscles used for chewing can become sore from overuse.
- Sleep Disruption: Bruxism can disrupt sleep with the noise and discomfort of grinding.

Rinse mouth guards with cool water after each use, and avoid hot water or harsh chemicals that can damage it.

Explore conditions that may need a mouth guard by scanning the QR code.

This content is provided for informational purposes only. "Wellness Connection" and other oral health resources are reviewed by oral health care professionals but are intended for educational purposes only and not as advice related to your specific circumstances or as a substitute for medical or dental advice, diagnosis or treatment. Always seek the advice of your physician, dentist or other qualified health provider with any questions or concerns regarding a medical or dental condition.

Dental plans are administered by United Concordia Companies, Inc., and underwritten by United Concordia Insurance Company of New York, United Concordia Insurance Company. For information about which companies are licensed in your state, visit the "Disclaimers" link at www.UnitedConcordia.com. Administrative and claims offices located at 1800 Center Street, Suite 2B 220, Camp Hill, PA 17011 (888-884-8224).

Grin from Within™

United Concordia
dental®